The Crows Burned Out.

The home of Johnny Crow, the Brunswick hero, burned to the ground about 1:30 yesterday morning. The family were all asleep when the fire broke out, but Johnny awakened and rousing the rest threw open the doors and windows and assisted to get out the younger children. They escaped with their night-clothes, and are being cared for by neighbors.

Mrs. D. A. Bender and Mrs. M. A. Murphy are collecting clothes for the Crowe family, who lost all they had in the fire.

Mr. Crow being out of work, the family is quite destitute. Johnny also lost the medal recently presented by the News for his bravery.

THE STATE LIBRARY.

Librarian Ponjade Outlines Its Present Condition.

Wishing to investigate the statement of a contemporary that the State Library had received extraordinary accessions lately, an APPEAL reporter visited the institution, where he found Mr. Ponjade at work. An examination in the North room showed that at least one-third of the practical working law text books on the shelves have been purchased during the last three years.

The remainder of the law department has not deteriorated; numerous incomplete sets and systems of reports, having been filled up, besides keeping up the ordinary growth.

In the miscellaneous library probably the greatest attention has been given to the reference department, the books of which have been brought together, and three hundred dollars worth of new books added. Next in importance are the additions to the historical and biographical departments. The scientific section has received attention also, as well as those devoted to travel, religion and political economy.

In the departments of poetry, art and fiction, the additions have not been so great, but each of these has received enough attention to make a perceptible growth. A small, well selected medical reference department has also been added.

When complimented on his success Mr. Ponjade said:

"I found a good library—the law department in some respects unexcelled by any. In miscellaneous lines we had, and have, only a foundation. Those who in the past performed duty here did much excellent work. My immediate predecessor gave me valuable assistance. Lack of appropriations has prevented the regular employment of clerical aid. This has been injurious. But those assistants whom I have temporarily employed have given faithful and intelligent service."

"The Secretary of State has aided the library very materially; and other State officers have shown their good will when required. The Capitol Commissioners allowed me to use $135 from the Furniture and Repairs Fund. This built a dust-proof and mouse-proof room, and furnished it with over one thousand linear feet of shelving. This took from the floor of an attic room a large mass of unassorted books which had been accumulating there for many years. I regret that lack of funds may prevent the assortment and arrangement of these, and a considerable number of other books. But there is a limit to the amount of manual labor that one man can do, and one can be in only one place at a time. In the partial rearrangements made necessary by growth in the Library proper, the janitors have helped during the occasional hours when other duties didn't claim them. I have also requested and obtained valuable suggestions from friends. Going? all right. Come again."

The Con. Virginia.

The strong opening price of Consolidated California & Virginia shares in Friday's Board transactions was followed by a marked reaction. On the presumption that the shrinkage resulted from an unfavorable change in the situation on the 1100 level, Mr. Rule was interviewed and stated that the raise above the 1000 level is looking better than when the ore was first cut on Friday. The ore shows stronger to the south and it will be followed in that direction when the raise is further advanced. Mr. Rule is confident that he has an agreeable surprise party in store for Consolidated California and Virginia shareholders and says he sincerely sympathizes with the short contingent that has been "coppering him on every turn."

His health has improved wonderfully since his last visit here, and the chances are decidedly flattering that he will live to enjoy his share of the profit from the ore development that he is now making.—Enterprise.

HARRISON IN COLORADO.

He Cheers the Silver Men of That State.

President Harrison, in a speech delivered at Trinidad, Colorado, day before yesterday, after discussing the tariff issue, spoke as follows on the silver question:

"You had another interest out here which you have asserted with a good deal of vehemence and determination, and that is the silver question. Now, I say to you to-day what I said when I was President, and what I always believed, that the larger use of silver for money and for the coinage of silver upon a basis to be agreed upon that would maintain its parity with gold is good for the whole world. I do not believe that we could run free coinage ourselves, while European Governments are pursuing the policy they have been pursuing with silver, but, my fellow citizens, there are clear indications now in England and Germany that they are feeling the results of the scarcity of gold and its prostrating effects upon industries."

"I believe these two great countries are nearer the right to-day than they have been for the last twenty years. They are considering favorably the question of the larger and free use of silver as a money metal, and bi-metalism has gained strength in England. I think these countries will come to the next silver conference with greater readiness than in any recent years, and will agree with us upon a basis for the larger use of silver as money."

"I would have been glad if this could have been accomplished while I was at Washington. I would rather have signaled my administration by that act than by any other that I know of. [Cheers.] I thank you for listening to this speech I did not intend to make. Possibly I may be sorry for having made it. [Cries of "Never."] I have spoken with frankness and that interest in public affairs I take now as a private citizen."

Nevada Potatoes.

A letter received at this office yesterday from a friend in San Francisco says the Lyon County Times, states that he is informed by the purchasing agent of supplies for the Palace Hotel in the city, that the late rains have destroyed the potato crop in the potato district of California.

This party is now in communication with D. A. Bender, of Carson, for the purchase of all potatoes on the Carson river. This being the case, it might be a good plan for Nevada farmers, and particularly those of Lyon county, not to be too eager to dispose of their spuds.
